"The demand to surrender Sumter was made on the 11th, and refused, not only by Anderson, but by the unanimous voice of his command. On Friday morning, at three o'clock, the rebels sent word that fire would be opened in an hour, and at four o'clock the fire was opened on us from every direction, in-cluding a hidden battery. The fire opened with a volley from seventeen mortars, firing ten-inch shells and shot from thirty-three guns, mostly columbiads. We took breakfast, however, very leisurely. The command was divided into three watches, each un-der direction of two officers. After breakfast they immediately went to their guns, and opened fire on Moultrie, Cummings' Point and Sullivan Island. The iron battery of Cumming's Point was of immense strength, and most of our shots glanced off.

"There was scarcely a room left in Moultrie inhabitable. Several shots went through the floating battery, but it was little damaged. Two guns on the iron battery were dismounted. A man was stafired, and the garrison was thus enabled to dodge. At first the workmen were reluctant to help work the guns, but after ward they served most willingly and effectively against the iron battery.
